War Summary of The Latest Events

The British captured a strong position southeast of Grandecourt and some prisoners. The position taken is rising ground covering the Courcellette-Miramont road northeast of Arras. Wednesday at dawn the British penetrated to the German third line of trenches, a distance of 250 yards. During the raid two machine gun emplacements and a number of dugouts were destroyed. Many of the defenders hiding in the dugouts were killed by the bombers. Forty prisoners and a machine gun were brought back to the British lines. On the Somme and northeast of Ypres raids were carried out, with heavy loss to the enemy. East of Armentieres and south of Messines the Germans raided the British lines, but were repulsed. Three enemy ammunition dumps were exploded by British shells.

Sir Douglas Haig is confident that this is the decisive year, but whether it will be the year of peace also he would not prophesy when interviewed by French correspondents. Railways and heavy guns have been his great need, and work on these is being rapidly pushed forward. The British Commander has no doubts as to his ability to smash through at many points when the supreme moment comes. "The total destruction of the German army" is his final goal. With this purpose in view, the next British drive will not be launched until the resources at his command enable Haig to overwhelm the enemy. Meanwhile the British troops are getting inured to danger and becoming familiar with the ground by constant raids on the enemy trenches.

Heavy fighting on the Roumanian front is reported in both Russian and German despatches. On both sides of the Jacobeni-Kimpolung road, on the Bukovina-Roumanian border, a fierce engagement has been ranging since Monday, when the Austro-Germans with strong forces attacked the Russian positions on the neighboring heights. The enemy carried one of the heights by assault on Monday, lost it on Monday night when the Russians counter-attacked, and finally regained it and another height on Tuesday by rushing up reinforcements. The Russians admit a retirement in this sector of over two miles, where they consolidated their defensive on a hill about a mile east of Jacobeni. On the rest of the front there are signs of renewed activity. The Germans claim to have captured twelve hundred Russians in the fight for the Jacobeni heights, in addition to three guns and twelve machine guns.

the rest of the front there are signs of renewed activity. The Germans claim to have captured twelve hundred Russians in the fight for the Jacobeni heights, in addition to three guns and twelve machine guns.

On the French front surprise attacks intermittent artillery duels and aerial engagements are the only breaks in the calm that still prevades this section of the western zone. North of Flirey the French batteries wrought havoc on the enemy's organizations. East of Rhimes the enemy was raided in the Prosnès sector.

Dunkirk and Nancy were shelled by German aviators. Several civilians were killed in Dunkirk. The French aviators bombed the aviation grounds at Etreillers and Rancourt and several railway stations and munition factories.

On the Belgian front the artillery is in full blast. The enemy continues to keep the Belgians occupied with night attacks. Wednesday night the Germans attacked the line east of Peryse, but were driven off.

British coal mines have been taken over by the Board of Trade for the duration of the war. A new department will be created, with Guy Cadthrop, General Manager of the London & Northwestern Railway, as Controller. The constant friction between the mine owners and workers had reached a point where intervention became imperative. The safety of the Empire and victory in this war depends in the last resort on the British miners, who keep the Grand Fleet, transport services and munitions factories supplied with fuel.

The submarine campaign has had no effect upon the British sea communications with the Allied armies. It is reported that the type of submarine now in use by Germany is not so efficient as the previous undersea boats either in the offensive strength of the craft, or in the experience of the crews. Seven ships were sunk Wednesday, including one American vessel. The losses amounted to about ten thousand tons. The safe arrival at Liverpool of the giant liners Adriatic and Carmania, and of other large British vessels, proves that German threats to drive British shipping off the high seas is far from being accomplished. By standardizing mercantile shipping the British shipyards have been able to turn out vessels quickly, and so replace a large percentage of the boats sunk.

CRUDE WIRELESS!

Long Used by an Indian Amazon Valley.

In these days of wireless it may be interesting to learn long ago as July, 1898, the local Journal recorded the use of a wireless telegraphic apparatus among the Catuquinaru, a tribe of the Amazon valley, America.

The apparatus, called consists of a hole in the ground half filled with coarse sand layers of fine sand, fragme and bone and powdered most to the surface of. These materials are surro case of hard palm wood, tends above the surface. part of the apparatus consist of hide, wood and hard between the upper layers an layers there is a hollow space, much like the stick the bass drum, the native layer of rubber that forms the instrument.

One of these instruments sealed in each hamlet of the villages are not more than and are placed in a direct south line. Although a person lying outside the building the apparatus is kept cannot be of the stick on the rubber quite distinct in a similar mile distant. When one of the instruments is struck the ones to the north and south blow. The Indian station one of the posts answers and by means of code messages conversation can be carried

GREWSOME PRES

SAVE YOUR COAL

The fuel situation in Napanee is get- ting acute. The coal dealers have very little coal on hand and are dol- ing it out to their customers in small lots, so that, if possible, every family will be able to get a little.

Wood is also very scarce, some people having to burn slabs to keep their fires going. Very little wood is coming on the market. Farmers who have wood complain that the roads are too bad to haul wood, and those having wood to cut say it is impos- sible to get men to cut wood even though exceptionally good wages are offered.

The Napanee schools are getting low in fuel. At the Public Schools there is very little coal and no wood, ow- ing to the failure of one of the deal- ers to deliver to the schools twenty- five tons of coal contracted for early in the season. Two of the dealers have each delivered twenty-five tons to the schools, their share of the coal contracts. At the Collegiate there is sufficient wood for a week or so, and though the School Board have pur- chased several cars of wood, the rail- ways have not as yet delivered any of it.

The churches also are getting short of fuel and may have to curtail their services somewhat unless speedily re- lieved by the arrival of some of the coal which all the dealers have on the way, but which the railways have failed to deliver.

Farmers having wood cut and ready to draw would help matters somewhat if they would rush some of it to town where purchasers are eagerly awaiting supplies.

GERMANY'S LAST HOPE

Ruthless Submarine Campaign
Expected to Win War.

Emperor William Has Called Important Conference to Discuss the Growing Anger of Neutral Nations but It Is Not Believed That Any Restriction Will Be Placed Upon the Pirates.

LONDON, Feb. 13.—An important conference at Headquarters has been called by Emperor William, presumably to discuss the submarine question, says the Exchange Telegraph Company's Amsterdam correspondent Sunday.

Dr. von Bethmann-Hollweg, the Imperial Chancellor, and high army and navy officials will attend, and it is reported that the possibility of negotiations with neutrals for modifying the terms of the recent German memorandum will be discussed.

Reports from Vienna received at The Hague and transmitted by the Exchange Telegraph Company say that the Austro-Hungarian Government is negotiating with American Ambassador Penfield over the question of allowing Americans to travel
unhindered in the Mediterranean,
hoping thereby to avert a severance of relations between Austria-Hungary and the United States.

It is not expected, the despatch adds, that the negotiations will succeed, because Germany is averse to giving any pledge regarding Americans, on the ground that it would weaken the blockade in the Mediterranean, and Austria-Hungary is unable to give a guarantee without Germany's sanction.

The Berlin Kreuze Zeitung, according to a Geneva despatch to Paris, says that Chancellor von Beth-mann-Hollweg counts upon the submarine to end the war quickly.

"Every day badly employed," adds
the paper, "is lost for Germany and gained for Britain, which perfects her means of defence. We must hasten our action. Five or six months will suffice. May God grant that we do not renew with our submarines
our deceptive experiences with Zep-pelins."

Terse British Reply.

LONDON, Feb. 13.—The Foreign Office has issued a statement showing that just before the rupture of diplomatic relations between Germany and the United States, Germany through an American channel, notified Great Britain that she would no longer permit, as heretofore, the transportation of British and German incapacitated war prisoners on hospital ships to and from Holland, such method of transportation being
"no longer considered safe, owing to changes which have occurred." It was added that henceforth transportation would only be permitted either by Dutch paddle-wheel steamships, which guaranteed safe conduct from the German side, or by hospital ships to Southern France, outside the prohibited maritime zone,
and thence to Switzerland.

The German notification further announced that the transport of severely wounded English was temporarily suspended until Great Britain replied to this note.

The Foreign Office appends the note:

"Comment on the nature of such communications or upon the charac-

Hun Campaign of Ruthlessness Not a Success.

NEW YORK, Feb. 13.—More than 1,100 vessels arrived at or sailed un-harmd from United Kingdom ports
during the first nine days of Germany's unrestricted submarine warfare in British waters, according to an announcement made here Saturday by persons in authoritative touch with British Admiralty officials.

Seven hundreds vessels entered United Kingdom ports safely, and 410 departed, according to this information. The Admiralty officials are declared to be convinced that Germany's renewed undersea activity is a failure in so far as it tends to bring about starvation of the people of the British Isles.

Other figures declared to have been received from Admiralty sources, covering the U-boat operations from February 1 to February 9, inclusive, show that sixteen ships escaped after being attacked.

The total number of vessels destroyed within the period, according to these figures, was eighty-nine. Of these, twenty-one were trawlers and smacks.

May Arm Ships.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 13.—The Administration has under consideration the proposition as to whether it will supply guns to the American Line, to be utilized in arming the merchant passenger liners for defense against German submarine attack. The matter is being considered jointly by the State and Navy Departments and the White House, with whom those departments have been in close touch.
It was learned late Sunday night that no decision had been reached.

The matter is being considered from the standpoint of broad general policy. It was learned that there is no basis for objection by the State Department to the furnishing of guns to the company for mounting on their ships, and that the Navy Department is perfectly willing to furnish the necessary guns to the company if the State Department offers no objection, and the President, representing the Administration, is willing. While no decision has been reached, the prospects as they stood Sunday night are understood to rather favor some action being taken in favor of the Navy Department, supplying the necessary guns to the company provided the American Line itself will find the necessary gunners for use in manning the guns.

Gerard and Suite to Sail.

ZURICH, Switzerland, Feb. 13.—
The correspondent of the Central News learned personally Sunday night by inquiries made of the German and United States embassies, as well as from other authoritative sources, that Ambassador Gerard and his suite will sail for the United States on Feb. 24.

It was stated by some of the newspaper correspondents that there will be but few of the Americans who will brave the present situation, it appearing to all that war will involve the United States within the next month at the very latest.

HOW SOAP WORKS.

It Cleans Because It Emulsifies the Oil That Holds the Dirt.

Why does soap take out the dirt? The answer to this question has been argued many times by chemists, and as cleanliness is necessary and enormous quantities of soap have to be used it is well that we should know how soap does its work.

It is fat or oil that especially makes things dirty. If only we can melt or get rid of the oil on hands or clothes we soon can make them clean, and the real use of soap is that it disposes of oil. It does this in at least two ways. Most soaps have in them a great deal of alkali. This alkali dissolves the oil.

But soap takes the dirt from things in another way, as we know when we use soaps that have no alkali in them at all. It has the power of breaking up oil into a number of tiny little drops, with all the dirt that the oil has collected.

A collection of tiny drops of oil held in some other fluid is called an emulsion. Water alone will not form an emulsion of any oil, because oil and water will not mix. That is the reason why we cannot get clean with water alone. But when water has soap dissolved in it it is able to make an emulsion of the oil on anything we are washing and so make it clean.—Exchange.

LIVE AND KEEP ON LEARNING.

Look Ahead to Doing Your Best Work After You Are Sixty.

"If you die before you are eighty-five years old you come to an untimely end." Earl Barnes of New York, an exponent of longevity and defier of Dr. Osler, made a large audience sit up and take notice when he made this statement recently.

"Thirty-five per cent of the world's greatest work has been done in the age decade between sixty and seventy years, 21 per cent between seventy and eighty, and 6 per cent above eighty."

Mr. Barnes cited a score of political, scientific, philosophical, commercial and military leaders who are just beginning their work at sixty years.

"The man who does one thing continuously is old at forty," he said. "But get out and study, travel and broaden your horizon. If you are a woman, don't put your broom in the same corner every day. Hide it. Break up your routine or you are lost."

"The farmer at fifty years turns the farm over to the boys, moves to the city and spends the remainder of his life watching the trains arrive is wasting his life. He might as well be dead, and he soon is."

"There is no reason why you can't be learning every year of your life."

An Early British Naval Failure at the Dardanelles.

GOT HIS FLEET INTO A TRAP.

Admiral Duckworth Could Have Won Had He Acted Promptly, but He Hesitated, Gave the Turks Time to Arm and Was Bombarded Back to the Sea.

The unsuccessful campaign at Gallipoli when the forces of the allied powers failed in their attempt to reach Constantinople after Turkey had arrayed herself on the side of Germany recalls the time when Sir John Duckworth sailed through the Dardanelles and then turned round and sailed out again. It was in 1807, when Napoleon was at war with more than half a world and when England had on the throne a king with an infirm brain and a ministry called that of "all the talents," which in spite of its name was wretchedly inefficient.

The French were trying to come to an understanding with the irresolute Sultan Selim, which was greatly disquieting to the czar since in view of the great victories of the "Little Corporal" in Prussia he could ill afford to spare any forces from the Russian frontier. So he asked the British to send a fleet to the sublime porte and compel Selim to make terms with Russia and England.

Accordingly Sir John Duckworth was ordered to join Admiral Louis in the Aegean sea and lead the combined fleets up the Dardanelles to the Turkish capital, where, after securing the safety of Mr. Arbuthnot, the British ambassador, he was to dictate terms to the sultan.

It is harder to sail up the Dardanelles than to sail out because there is a powerful current that flows constantly from the Black sea to the Aegean. There were no great steam cruisers then, and Sir John had to wait several days for favorable conditions. Meantime one of the largest of the ships, the Ajax, carrying seventy-four guns, unaccountably blew up, and some 250 Englishmen were killed.

On a February morning in 1807, however, seven battleships sailed into the mouth of the ancient Hellespont and bore their way up the strait. They encountered only a light and ineffectual fire from the forts. There was no effective preparation for defensive action on either the European or Asiatic side from the mouth of the Dardanelles to the city of Constantine.

Had Sir John given the sultan a twenty-four hour ultimatum and trained his guns on the citadel he need not have fired a shot. He would have accomplished the purpose for which he had come and could have sailed out with his ships unharmed and himself covered with glory. But he was seized with timidity and began unaccountably to negotiate and temporize.

TRAVEL AS AN EDUCATOR.

Seeing the World and Its Wonders Broadens the Mind.

Millions of people never travel. Rising day after day, they look out upon the same scenes, go through the same daily tasks and tumble into the same bed again at night, no different than they were the day before.

Each year thousands are traveling for the first time, not only the wealthy, but the middle class and even the poorest. They are coming to view travel not as an extravagance, but as the price of comfort, health, experience and knowledge. Ocean liners are veritable floating hotels, with ballrooms, promenades and conservatories, while trains are the last word in comfort with their thickly upholstered seats and handsomely appointed dining cars with up to the minute service.

The educational value of travel is beginning to have the greatest weight. Boys and girls who have been to the best schools help complete their education by seeing the world or such parts of it as their time and circumstances will permit. The grown up who is wise realizes the broadening influence of travel and counts each day well spent that brings him new experiences in foreign fields. No one can fail to be uplifted by seeing some of God's masterpieces or the handiwork of man in picture, sculpture, cathedral and splendid public edifices. Nor is it necessary to leave one's own country. There is plenty to be seen and learned in our home land if we will only go in search of it.—Kathleen Hills in Leslie's.

STANDARD TIME.

The Railroad Confusion That Existed Before Its Adoption.

Prior to 1883 time differences caused especially confusing complications on railroads in the United States. It was formerly customary for a road to use throughout large sections of its territory the local time of one of the principal cities through which it passed.

The result was that when two railroads met in some smaller town it frequently happened that they were running under widely different time systems. As many as five different kinds of time were thus simultaneously in use in a single town.

It was the need of an international standard of time that led to the prime meridian conference at Washington in 1882. This recommended the use of the Greenwich civil time, reckoned from zero up to twenty-four hours.

In accordance with this resolution and to remedy the aforementioned difficulty the United States and Canada selected a series of standard meridians differing in longitude from that of Greenwich, England, by exact multiples of 15 degrees.

On Oct. 18, 1883, a convention was called by W. F. Allen, secretary of the general railway time convention, which decided on the introduction of standard time, to take effect on Nov. 18, 1883, and on that day the change to the present system was made without any difficulty.—Pittsburgh Chronicle-Telegraph.

How the Dust Gets In.

RAILWAY WRECKING.

Quick Rescue Work When a Smashup Occurs.

"SAVE LIFE" IS FIRST.

To Accomplish This Ever Strained, and When They Have Done "Clear the Tracks," of Property Loss, Is the First.

Marvelously efficient is the wrecking machinery in use today for quick work when an accident occurs on one of the roads. Some of the latest appliances for clearing a wreck are described in the Popular Science Monthly. The men who do this work are called wreckers.

"Wrecking trains are every division of important standing idle in the yards, a calamity—a crane car, with power to lift a freight car, lifts a toy; a supply car, ropes, cables, chains, jacks, tools, lanterns, fire apparatus, mite, rails, ties; a caboose, a wrecking crew."

"When the word comes that the express and the passenger train have tried to see which can get off the track the wrecking boss takes command in a hurry. The men—these minutemen—each with his specialty. Trackmen, men skilled in strong men, slender men, small but muscular men, from roundhouse and shop yards and office at the station. The wrecking boss takes command, the best engine available back with a clear track the wrecking crew gets to the disaster, often a special containing doctors."

"There is only one order when the wrecking crew is called—'save life.' But once the train is extricated—and they are in remarkably short time changes. It is not, as might be supposed, 'save property.' It is 'clear the tracks.' It makes no difference whether the wrecked freight cars contain automobiles, or pianos, or fruit, which might be a valuable work. If the contents are saved in less than an hour only one thing to do. The crane is backed down to the wreck, tentacle-like hook descends and ropes are brought in slowly, surely, almost imperceptibly, the crane swings the wrecked car and its contents to one side."

"Sometimes the easiest way to clear the lines is to burn the wreck. Tracks can be quickly damaged, but nothing can be done. The price of the wrecked car is nothing against the delay, for the price of a wreck is in stunning geometrical progression. A few hundred dollars an hour, it may be many thousands in the second or third hour."

the brilliant activity of the greatest city of the southern hemisphere (the fourth city of the Americas after New York, Chicago and Philadelphia) draws the Argentines to it as a flame attracts moths, and one-fifth of the population of the country struggles there in feverish competition for pleasure and gain.

No traveler to the southern countries but stops as long as he may in Buenos Aires to enjoy or to study the most cosmopolitan, yet most Latinized, of the Spanish American cities. The metropolis is at once the heart and the brain of the country.—National Geographic Magazine.

City Is Self Conscious.

The city life is conscious of itself, the small town life is not, asserts Seymour Deeming in the Atlantic. An army of fairly competent minds is busy interpreting the life of the city to itself, and this so thoroughly that not a teamster or ribbon counter clerk of the urban lot but has his spokesman in the public prints and partakes somewhere of the typical. And the sales person who has once seen sales people elevated to the rank of printed or acted comedy or tragedy is conscious of a new sense of personal consequence which years of obscurity are powerless wholly to erase. To have had one's social setting touched by the wand of art is to have shaken hands with a celebrity; life is never afterward quite the same drab commonplace.

Willing, but Not Anxious.

Ministers sometimes observe some curious phases of human nature among persons soliciting their services in the performance of a marriage ceremony.

"Will you take this woman for your wedded wife?" asked a clergyman of a would be bridegroom.

"Yes; I'll take her," remarked the man in a half dejected tone, "but," he added, with surprising frankness, "I'd rather it were her sister."

Get Free Rides.

of Napoleon at the sultan's court, encouraged Duckworth's irresolution and led him on from day to day with specious promises.

Meanwhile men, women and children, Christians and Mohammedans, were working day and night to erect suitable defenses along the famous waterway, until in no long time the whole shore, as well as the forts of the Dardanelles, was bristling with guns. Duckworth's opportunity had passed. He had made the fatal mistake of giving the Turks time to find their leader.

For two weeks the parleyings went on, while the fleet's officers through their glasses could see the constant arrival of cannon, ammunition and troops. At last Sir John awoke to the fact that he was in a trap and had barely time to get out. Fortunately the wind was in his favor, and the seven battleships began their ignominious retreat.

What a contrast between the coming in and the going out!

For sixty miles they ran the gantlet of a continual and heavy fire. It was incessant and galling in the sea of Marmora, and in the Dardanelles it was terrific. There stone balls, weighing 700 and 800 pounds, snapped the rigging, broke down the masts and crushed in the decks. The roll of the artillery was deafening, and the smoke hung over everything in dark, impenetrable folds.

The humiliated admiral could do nothing but run, and as the current was with him he finally reached the Aegean sea, although with a badly battered fleet.

It has always seemed curious to the reader of history that Duckworth escaped the fate of Admiral Byng, who was court martialed and shot fifty years before for just such another lamentable error of judgment. The only explanation appears to be that this was a time of such multiplied fears and panics that even so serious a matter as this was soon forgotten in the more absorbing and importunate problem of national defense against the designs of Napoleon.—Youth's Companion.

Cleopatra means "fame of her father." It was once very common among the royal ladies of Egypt and Greece and survives in the French Cleo. Cleopatra was born in Alexandria 59 B. How the Dust Gets In.

When the barometer falls the air around expands into a large volume, and the air inside the bookcase, the clothes closet and the cupboard also expands and forces itself out at every minute crevice. When the barometer rises again the air inside the cupboard, as well as outside, condenses and shrinks and the air is forced back into the cupboard to equalize the pressure, and along with the air in goes the dust. The smaller the crevice the stronger the jet of air, the farther goes the dirt. Witness the dirt tracks so often seen in imperfectly framed engravings or photographs. Remember, whenever you see the barometer rising, that an additional charge of dust is entering your cupboard and bureau drawers.

Grave Humor.

The punster is irrepressible. He even indites his jokes on tombstones. An epitaph in Waltham abbey informs us that Sir James Fullerton died "fuller of faith than of fears, fuller of resolutions than of pains, fuller of honor than of days."

There is another of Daniel Tears: "Though strange, yet true, full seventy years was his wife happy in her Tears."

This was written of an organist: "Here lies one blown out of breath who lived a merry life and died a Merideth."

Another says: "Here lies Thomas Huddleston. Reader, don't smile, but reflect as this tombstone you view that Death, who killed him, in a very short while will huddle a stone upon you."—Pearson's Weekly.

STRENGTH OF EGGSHELLS.

The Great End to End Pressure It Requires to Break Them.

Few people are aware of the wonderful provision made by nature to protect against breakage the egg of a bird, by the use of the arch.

"The fact that no man, no matter how strong he may be, is able to break a sound hen's egg by squeezing it between his hands, applying the pressure
according to the axis of the egg, made me try to find out the resistance that an egg can withstand in this way,"
says G. Herrasti of Westerly, R. I., in describing his experiments in the Scientific American.

"Brown eggs proved stronger than white ones and broke under a pressure averaging 155 pounds, the minimum being 125 pounds and the maximum 175.

"White eggs broke under an average pressure of 112.5 pounds.

"The method employed was as follows: The egg, setting point upward, was placed on a platform scale and pressure was applied to it by a lever and a jack. Felt seats conveniently disposed prevented the egg coming in contact with the wood.

"The shells were measured for thickness and found to be .013 inch to .014 inch. When it was considered that the average diameter of the eggs was 1 3/4 inches some idea may be formed of the enormous strength provided by nature."

THROWING A BOOMERANG.

Easy to Learn and Is More of a Knack
Than a Science.

The boomerang is thrown overhand.
Grasping the small end in his right hand, the man moves his hand backward as far as he can over the shoulder; then he brings it forward with all the force possible, letting the boomerang slip from his grasp when his hand is well forward in front.

Throwing the boomerang is more of a knack than a science. It may be learned by any American or European who gives the time and patience for practice. However, only native Australians acquire marked ability in making the boomerang turn exactly where they wish. The natives are not averse to using the boomerang as an American policeman uses his night stick. The native has the advantage over the "cop." He can deal an effective blow without being near the victim.

One of the most interesting implements used by the native Australian is the woomera or spear thrower. The spear thrower resembles a rubber plant leaf with its edges turned upward. At the pointed end there is a barb or hook against which the native places, the butt of his spear. In this way he can get considerable additional power for throwing the spear because of the increased purchase.

BASEBALL STORIES.

Connie Mack's Trick on Cap Anson and
the Foul Strike Rule.

There may have been better catchers
than Connie Mack, but none any foxier. Connie was with the Pirates back in 1893, when he played a little trick on Cap Anson that won a game for Pittsburgh.

Ad Gumbert was pitching for the Pirates and got himself into a hole.
Chicago filled the bases in a hurry, and only one man was out. Cap Anson came to bat.

In those days Cap was a terror to pitchers. The situation was serious.
Cap had a way of taking two strikes and then lighting on the third one for fare-ye-well.

And so it was here. Gumbert floated two across, and Cap didn't blink an eye.

Suddenly Connie Mack stepped aside, while Gumbert held the ball, and took off his mask. He wiped his brow, tossed his glove aside and started removing his chest protector.

Anson was amazed. He looked around and glanced with wide open eyes at Mack. "What's the matter, Connie?" he inquired. "Ain't you going to give me a crack at the ball?"

As he spoke Connie signaled to Gumbert, and he whipped a fast one straight across. Mack reached out his

CHINESE SOLDIERS.

They Are Regarded With Aversion by Their Own Countrymen.

The well known olden dislike of,
even contempt for, soldiers common to the industrious masses of China, in town as in country, is based on their experience that the soldier is a loafer most of the time and a terror to his country when war is in the air. They have not glorified valor or quite grasped the beauty, not to say the duty, of dying for one's country, although when they do fight they face death with a great indifference.

Discussing this phase of the Chinese character, Mr. Yone Noguchi, the Japanese writer, says in the course of a recent article:

"The Chinese hatred of soldiery business or the encouragement of offensive indolence is well explained in a famous ballad written by Po Chai, called 'The Arm Broken Old Man.' This old man was not infirm until he received in his youth an order to become a soldier and intentionally broke his arm in order to be excused from such duty. Although his arm pained badly on a cold or rainy day, he was glad to be thankful for it, for, while his friends had been killed in the battlefield, he alone could enjoy a long life."

"What a different sentiment from that of us Japanese, whose loyalty to the flag and the imperial house is taught to begin with the slighting of our own lives."—East and West News.

Two Visiting Cards.

In 1844 when M. de Lagrene was sent under Louis Philippe as minister extraordinary to China the courtesy of the ambassador greatly impressed the Chinese statesmen, particularly their "doyen." After the negotiations had been completed and M. de Lagrene was ready to embark a delegation brought him a great roll of paper. The ambassador seeing this parcel at once thought this was a present, knowing Chinese methods, but to his surprise they started to unroll the cylinder, which extended to about fifty meters of paper, over 162 feet. Then he learned that it was the visiting card of the "doyen," in returning his modest little Bristol ball
the humiliated ambassador added a few words, which read, "The ambassador of France regrets that he is able to offer only these simple words to your excellency."

after a time crumbles away. The most valuable pearl ever known is supposed to have become diseased. It belonged to a Russian millionaire who kept it carefully locked in a casket and refused to show it even to his most intimate friends. One day some jewel experts prevailed upon him to let them see the precious gem. When he opened the casket he was dismayed to find that the pearl had been attacked by disease and was already changing color. Soon afterward a heap of white powder was all that was left of the jewel.

Key of Tibaldo.

The "key of death" is a large key which is shown among the weapons at the arsenal at Venice. It was invented by Tibaldo, who, disappointed in love, designed this instrument for the destruction of his rival. The key is so constructed that the handle may be turned around, revealing a small spring, which being pressed a very fine needle is driven with considerable force from the other end. This needle is so very fine that the flesh closes over the wound immediately, leaving no mark, but the death of the victim is almost instantaneous.

Uses For Viscose.

By converting cellulose, one of the elements of wood, into a gelatinous material known as viscose, a wide field is opened up for the utilization of wood waste, and a new line of products, varying all the way from sausage casings to tapestry, is added to the already lengthy list.

An Ideal Wife.

"There will be fewer divorces," said a society woman, "when men treat women as their equals." "Do you know the kind of wife my ideal is?" a married man once said to me. "'Of course I do,' said I. 'Your ideal wife is the kind that's tickled to death over a birthday present of a bag of flour.'"

Going Too Far.

"A man should try to have a good opinion of himself." "Perhaps." "I mean a certain amount of self respect."

"Oh, that's all right, but some people don't seem able to distinguish between self respect and self admiration."—Birmingham Age-Herald.

Above Suspicion.

Phocion, when Alexander sent him a gift of 100 talents, asked those who brought it why he, of all the Athenians, should be given so much money. "Because he thinks you to be the only just and upright judge," they replied. "Then," returned Phocion, "let me seem so." And he would not take the gift.—Plutarch.

As he spoke Connie signaled to Gumbert, and he whipped a fast one straight across. Mack reached out his chest protector and blocked the ball. Then he grabbed it as it rolled away, touched the plate, forcing the man who was on third, and then, throwing to first, doubled Anson. The Cap was so surprised he didn't even try to run.

Behind every change in rules lies a pretty little romance of one kind or another. According to George Moreland, it was McGraw and Thomas who forced the foul strike rule.

In the early nineties those two men were so adept in knocking fouls until they got one they could hit that they delayed the game indefinitely. It was nothing extraordinary for them to crack out twenty or so fouls in a single time at bat.

Like the expert cricket batter, they could tick the ball at will, just meeting it. They worried pitchers so that finally, in desperation, they would lay one across, waist high, and they'd crown it.

Protects the Shark's Eggs.

Protective mimicry, that cunning device of nature to preserve animals from their enemies, is well known in the eggs of certain fishes, notably the California shark, known as Gyrodontus francisci. The shark is of a sluggish habit, lurking among rocks, and its dark egg resembles a leaf of kelp or seaweed folded up spirally. It is deposited among the beds of kelp and clings to the leaves by the edges of the spirals. The young shark bursts open the end of the egg and swims away. Another shark's egg of the Pacific coast has tentacles which clasp the seaweed and also imitate its appearance.

The Troubled Professor.

"The professor is so dreadfully absentminded." "Yes?" "He paid marked attention to a pretty girl who lived near the college and was afraid she might get some legal hold on him, and so he wrote her a love letter with invisible ink." "Clever idea. Yes?" "Then he made a typewritten copy of the letter for his own protection and finally sent the girl the typewritten copy." "I see. Poor old prof." "And he didn't find out his mistake until the ink had faded, and now he wonders what he wrote?"

Name of the Poppy.

Quite unusual is the manner in which the poppy got its name. It is a corruption of the word "papa," which, though same in form, is not the same in meaning as the word which the child applies to its father.

This particular "papa" was a Celtic term applied to a soft "goodie" which the Celts fed their children. The seeds of the poppy were boiled into a pap, to induce sleep in the child, and so the plant came to be called the "papa" and then the poppy. While the seeds of our poppy are slightly narcotic, they do not contain the active qualities peculiar to opium.—Philadelphia North American.

Easily Recognized.

Watering Plants When Absent.

When it becomes necessary to close your apartment for a few days and there is no one to attend to the watering of indoor plants try this method: Place in the bathtub or washtub as many bricks as you have plants. Rest each pot on a brick, then fill tub with water till the bricks are well covered. The plants keep fresh a long time this way.

An Ounce of Prevention.

For the third time in one afternoon the lady found her new maid fast asleep in the kitchen easy chair. "What, asleep again?" she said. "When I engaged you you said you were never tired." "I know I did," the maid answered, "but I should be if I didn't sleep."—New York Times.

Didn't Feel Comfortable.

So great was the indignation of the American colonists in 1765 against the stamp act that the Connecticut stamp officer rode into Hartford on a white horse to deposit his resignation, with a thousand armed farmers riding after him, and said he "felt like death on a pale horse with all hades following him."

HIS TWO TENSE MOMENTS.

One a Ninth Inning Crisis, the Other a Dinner Table Climax.

I heard a prominent Cambridgeport tell of the two most tense moments of his life. But the tension in each case was different.

"I doubt if I ever shall forget either occasion," he said reflectively. "They were big moments.

"The first was when I was in college. I was captain of the baseball team that year. We came to the end of the ninth. We needed one run to tie the score and another to win the game. Two men were down and two on the sacks when I came to bat. And for once in my career I did it. I lined out a three bagger right over the railroad track. When I felt it go—well, that was one occasion.

"And the other." He chuckled, but a slow flush crept over his cheeks. "It was thirty years ago, soon after I left college. I went over to see a girl I thought was pretty nice and to meet her folks for the first time. I went on a Sunday. All the men were away. And they had duck for dinner." He stopped. "Ever carve a duck?" he asked meaningly. "No, neither had I before. Nor have I since." His flush deepened. "I never even went to see that girl again," he added plaintively.

BONEHEAD BASEBALL.

One Curious Break That Even the Umpires Did Not Notice.

Baseball's champion foolish play was made in a game between Washington and the White Sox in 1907. In that battle Larry Schlafly was captain of the Washingtons and also played second base.

At the end of an early inning Schlafly went out to telephone or buy a goat or something and was delayed so long that the Senators had three men put out before his return.

The Sox came trotting in for their turn at bat. Washington took the field, with only eight men and nobody on second, and the game went on that way till Filder Jones hit one straight across second. Then, and not till then, was it discovered that there was nobody on second base.

Incredible as it may seem, nineteen men—seventeen players and two umpires—had started the half inning in this fashion and not one of them got wise till Jones' hit shot over the empty station.

Schlafly reappeared at this juncture, and the umpires decided that the hit was illegal when made with only eight men in the field. Jones had to go back and bat over

RE HYDRO-ELECTRIC CONTRACT AND RATES

Napanee, February 9th, 1917
To the Mayor and Council of the Town of Napanee:

Gentlemen,—I have been asked to give my opinion concerning the form of contract now being submitted by the Hydro Electric Commission to the users of electricity in the town. From the wording of the resolution I infer that in certain quarters there is an impression, or at least a suspicion, that this proposed change in the rates is an effort to obtain some undue advantage over the users in Napanee. I cannot detect anything of the kind in the contract itself, nor can I bring myself to believe that the Commission has any such intention. They have absolutely nothing to gain, no matter whether the rates be high or low. We must bear in mind that the Commission is composed of public officials appointed by the Government and this system of public ownership was introduced by the Legislature for the purpose of conserving and developing our water powers, and furnishing to the people electricity at the actual cost. It is not a case of increasing rates with a view of swelling the dividends, but one of the avowed objects of the Commission is to prevent private monopolies from taking advantage of the consumers of electrical energy. I think, therefore, you may dismiss from your minds any such impressin or suspicion and you are, I believe, quite justified in looking upon the proposed change in the rates as a straight-forward business proposition, submitted by a body of men whose only aim is to serve the public to the best of their ability. The favorable reception that the work of the Commission has secured in every part of the province should in itself be a sufficient guarantee of their good faith. The proposed change in the rates at the present rate of consumption will, I believe, cause a saving of $4000 or $5000 to the consumers in Napanee. This also should put an end to adverse criticism as to the object the Commission has in view. It must be borne in mind that the purchase by the Commission of the assets of The Electric Power Company Limited, include not only the plant of the Seymour Power & Electric Co., Limited, in Napanee, but also the plants of twenty other companies. All of the municipalities served by these various plants form only a small percentage of the hundreds of municipalities that are now provided with electricity by this same Commission. It is essential in carrying on the business of such a gigantic concern that there should be, so far as practicable, absolute uniformity in the system of rating the various towns, villages and cities that are being served. I am informed by a representative of the Commission that the rating is worked out by skilled experts who endeavor to weigh every consideration and furnish the current at its actual cost, and in adjusting the rates as between the consumers themselves they endeavor to adopt that system by which each consumer bears his just proportion of the expense incurred in supplying the current, and experience has shown that the system now sought to be introduced is the most equitable one yet devised.

that is manifestly to his advantage if he can do so, and the corporation has no right to interfere, especially if a uniform rate is offered to all users. The same applies to the corporation itself in respect to the electricity supplied to the municipality. Personally I intend to sign the contract and would advise all others to do the same, even those whose rates may be slightly increased. The general good of the municipality should be the first consideration of all public spirited citizens. I am not in any way alarmed at the clause in the Standard interpretation of rates which provides that "should any disagreement arise out of the application or intent of these interpretations it shall be referred to the Hydro-Electric Power Commission of Ontario whose decision shall be final." That clause was framed to cover disputes arising between individual consumers and municipalities which purchase their power in bulk from the Commission and distribute it themselves. It would be difficult to conceive a case where it could arise under such a contract as is submitted here, and even if it did arise I see no likelihood of trouble ahead.

If on the other hand any one of the users feel that they have a grievance and that the Commission is demanding from them a higher rate than is authorized under the original contract with the Seymour Power & Electric Co., I am of opinion that the higher rate cannot be collected. I am also of opinion that the council is not under any legal obligation to take any proceedings to enforce that contract, nor would I advise them to do so, if I am correct in my assumption that such users under the new system will be paying no more than their fair proportion of the cost of supplying electricity to the consumers of the town. If any such consumers desire to take proceedings themselves they are likely to be confronted with a great many difficulties, and in the end would probably find it a most expensive and unprofitable proceeding. Upon the whole I am of opinion that it is in the best interest of the Curious Water Pipe.

At Mount Lowe, Cal., the thirsty visitor has only to turn on a faucet projecting from a large tree near the hotel and water begins to flow. No water pipes are to be seen, and curiosity is aroused at once. The lower part of the tree is hollow, and the pipes are run underground and up through the hollow part to a knothole, where a faucet is attached. Around the faucet the hole is plugged up with cement which looks like the tree itself.

condition Handel was caught of rain and was obliged to work in a blacksmith's forge. He was in a silent mood or Blackstone showed no conversation, for in a little while began hammering away at accompanying his work with and was listening all the strokes of the hammering, which, by producing two sounds, according in time with the tune the man sang, as accompaniment. Handel, at home, remembered the air of the hammer accompaniment. He was both, and so we owe to a man the composition known as the "Unaccompanied Blacksmith."

Withering.
A man, an old time Iowa farmer, one occasion appeared before a judge and to enforce a law, he was brought with him a book to read Blackstone, whereupon the young man, moving uneasily about in the room, said, "Mr. East, I have read Blackstone."

"Yes," responded Enoch, the judge over the top of his head with an air of surprise. Comment.

sought to be introduced into the most equitable one yet devised.

It is a comparatively simple matter to compare the old rates with the new, and I think it will be found in the vast majority of cases that there will be a substantial saving to the consumer, and in the few cases where the new rate for lighting is higher than the old, it will, I think, be found that these are cases of comparatively large houses consuming a small quantity of electricity. I further believe that in every case of an increase in either light or power the new rate will not work any real hardship as these consumers have been getting their electricity at less than cost, and the other consumers have been paying a portion of the cost that should have been assumed by them. I further believe that an analysis of the rates of all consumers who will pay more under the new system than under the old will show that very few indeed will under the new system pay a higher rate than could be imposed under the contract of June 19th, 1911, entered into between the Town and The Seymour Power & Electric Co. There is no doubt that that contract is in force to-day, and the council can insist upon a strict compliance with its terms, but it must be in its entirety, and if the council insists upon a strict adherence to the old rates it means that the consumers will pay $4000 or $5000 more per year than they would under the new system. The Commission has, I believe, made it quite clear that the town must accept one system or the other. They will not apply one system of rating to one set of consumers and another system to another set.

As to the rights of the individual users I am of the opinion that if the Commission offers to any user in the town electricity at a cheaper rate than he has been paying that user has a perfect right to conclude a contract with the town.

Upon the whole I am of opinion that it is in the best interest of the town and the citizens generally that the new rates should be endorsed by the council, and that all consumers should sign the contract. By so doing a large saving will be effected and our other rights under the contract with the Seymour Power & Electric Co. will not be impaired.

Yours truly,
W. S. HERRINGTON,
Town Solicitor.

Pigeons and a Doctor.
The carrier pigeon has been put to a new use by a doctor in Scotland who has a large and scattered practice. When he goes on long rounds he carries a number of pigeons with him. If he finds that some of his patients require medicine at once he writes out prescriptions and by means of his pigeons forwards them to his surgery. Here an assistant gets the messages, prepares the prescriptions and dispatches the medicine.

If after visiting a patient the doctor thinks he will be required later in the day, he simply leaves a pigeon, which is employed to summon him if necessary. To this enterprising physician the keeping of carrier pigeons means a saving of time and expense and labor.

MAXIMS OF MATRIMONY.

Suggestions That May Help Certain Husbands and Wives.

I hold fast to the private maxim that hardly anything is unendurable if one sets up that all mankind could not give one a quite worthy mate. But there is another alleviation; understanding not only that one is married to somebody else, but also that somebody else is married to oneself and that it is quite as hard for the other party. There are many excellent things to be done. Here are a few:

Do not open each other's letters. (For one reason, you might not like the contents.) And try not to look liberal if you don't even glance at the address or the postmark.

Vary your pursuits, your conversation and your clothes. If required vary your hair.

If you absolutely must be sincere let it be in private.

(Especially for wives.) Find out on the honeymoon whether crying or swearing is the more effective.

Once a day say to a wife, "I love you." To a husband, "How strong you are." If the latter remark is ridiculous say, "How clever you are!" for everybody believes that.

Forgive your partner seventy times seven. Then burn the ledger—W. L. George in Atlantic Monthly.

Swatted His Egoism.

An English lady was taken in to supper at a private party by a young Scotchman who had a high estimate of his own mental capacity. The talk drifted to the subject of the Scot abroad.

"I've often heard," said the lady, "that Scotsmen who leave their country are, generally speaking, much cleverer than those who stay at home."

"Oh, yes," replied the Scot, with an attempt at wit. "You see, the reason is that at every outlet there are persons stationed who examine all who pass, so that for the honor of the country no one is allowed to leave who is not able to uphold his own and his country's dignity."

"Oh, then," she said, with a bright smile, "you were smuggled, were you?" —Exchange.

LEGEND OF ST. BRENDAN.

It Claims the Irish Monk as the Real Discoverer of America.

The first discoverer of America, according to an old Irish tradition, was St. Brendan. Brendan lived in the sixth century and, according to legend, fitted out a vessel and sailed westward in the hope of discovering an island supposed to contain the paradise once tenanted by Adam and Eve. He was accompanied by fourteen monks, and the ship was "victualled for seven years."

After sailing forty days and forty nights they came to an island, where they found "a hall with tables spread with good meat and drink." They then sailed on for a long time and came to another island, "wherein were the whitest and greatest sheep they ever saw." After stopping for a time they proceeded with the voyage and came to a third island, called "the paradise of birds." After wandering about for seven years from island to island St. Brendan and his monks returned to Ireland, where they astonished the natives by tales of the wonders they had seen.

In spite of the wild and improbable features of this legend it was for centuries accepted as truth, and the Spanish government sent out several expeditions in search of the islands of St. Brendan. The St. Brendan legend formed one of the causes which led to the discoveries made by Columbus.

SPAN OF TWO LONG LINES.

They Connect the Era of the Zeppelin With That of the Sedan Chair.

The late Henry Cassaway Davis, once a vice presidential candidate, saw and heard as a boy in Baltimore in 1828 the ceremonies at the official beginning of the Baltimore and Ohio railroad.

The personage of the occasion, the driver of "the first spike," as we should say nowadays, was the last surviving signer of the Declaration of Independence, the richest American of the eighteenth century, the great gentleman and illustrious patriot, Charles Carroll of Carrollton.

Born in 1737, Charles Carroll had yet four years to live. Thus these two lives are an arch of nearly 180 years between the American colonies of George II.'s time and the third year of Mr. Wilson's administration, when Mr. Davis' long life came to an end. The year of his birth was 1823.

A mere two dozen of such lives as Carroll's and Davis', a dozen of their united span of years, would take us back to the first Punic war. Charles Carroll and Henry Cassaway Davis, who saw him, together take us from the sedan chair period to that of the Zeppelin.

OF THE MONKEY.

Prominent Are Affection, Curiosity and Sympathy.

They have excellent memories of observation and are able to tell their friends in a crowd even in absence. They are exceedingly and sympathetic in their sympathy and curiosity, the prominent traits in the monkey. They are significantly the important facts in the psychology of the monkey.

They are the most affectionate of all animals, excepting dogs and men. Their love reaches its culmination in the love of the mother for her child. The mother little one is the object of her love and affection. She nurses it, licks it and cleans its body. She holds it in her arms and rocks it to sleep, just as human mothers do. She divides every bite of food with her little one, but does not hesitate to slap it when it is rude. The monkey is generally very obedient.

The affection of monkeys is not confined to the love of the mother for her child. It exists among the different members of the same tribe and extends to human beings, especially to children. They would themselves be very fond of the monkey.

HERMANN'S FIRST VICTORY.

Hermann Defeated the Roman legions in the Year 10.

A great military victory of Hermann was achieved in the year 9 in the battle of the Marston. Publius Quintilius Varus, governor of Germany, committed a fatal error after his army had suffered a decisive defeat at the hands of the barbarians of Hermann. Hermann had formed a confederation of the nations between the Elbe and the Weser and renounced his allegiance to Rome. Varus advanced against him with an army of three legions. The Germans gradually withdrew and lured the Romans into a forest. There they ambushed the Romans and killed them. Varus, with 40,000 men, atoned for his defeat by slaying himself.

When the news of the defeat reached Augustus he went to his palace, crying out, "Vale, give me back my legions!" The Teutons were among the most dangerous of the enemies of Rome. In the reign of Theodosius they crossed the Rhine and drove the Romans out of Spain, France and Gaul.

A Great Surgeon Died.

Dr. Richat, the famous surgeon, died of typhoid fever. He was a colleague who was sitting beside him and said to him: "I am lost, but it is some time to know that my case is serious. During the last few days I have noticed some odd symptoms. I am studying them carefully. I may recover yet," said the immortal." replied Richat.

felt that the sport of racing and the consequent gambling is taking up too much of the New Zealanders' attention.

However that may be Mr. Raney's attack is not so much against those who gamble, although he disapproves of the practice, but principally against well-known business and public men, who, he claims, make extraordinary profits out of this gambling allowed by an exception to the Criminal Code of Canada. In 1910, for example, Mr. Raney says that the enquiry at Ottawa showed that the Hamilton Jockey Club was earning about 170 per cent on the actual investment and the Ontario Jockey Club about 70 per cent, that these earnings are altogether owing to the business of the race track gambling and that it was well-known public men to whom the privilege is allowed.

Mr. Raney claims that Members of Parliament and of the Ontario Legislature have spent many thousands of dollars in "lobbying" to secure favorable legislation and he says, "I charge that a corrupt traffic has arisen among Members of Parliament and of the Ontario Legislature in race track charters similar to the traffic in liquor licenses which characterized the later years of the liquor business in this province."

Mr. Raney contends that if we are going to license vice at all we had better take the license fee ourselves than to turn it over to individual public men. "The Province of Ontario," he said, "takes $125,000 now by way of license fee from the race track betting houses. It might take two millions and still leave a good percentage to the shareholders of the race track on their investments."

The Globe, taking up the matter, placed the responsibility for the present excessive number of race tracks upon the provincial authorities who, it claimed, had been lax in passing upon applications for the right to exercise the privileges granted under the Dominion legislation of 1910. "Attorney General Lucas has failed to live up to the principle declared by his predecessor," it declared.

Mr. Lucas in reply, repudiated responsibility and said: "I have nothing whatever to do with the granting or withholding of licenses for the race tracks, nor did my predecessor Mr. Foy." The Globe summarized his defence as "ill informed" and said "the shifting of responsibility by the Attorney General suggests some ground for the common belief that all the organizations enjoying the privileges so generously provided by the Treasurer, could not stand the strict scrutiny of their rights, under the Criminal Law, to those privileges."

Sun Life of Canada Sets New Records

RESULTS secured during the year 1916 re-affirm the position of the Sun Life Assurance Company of Canada as the leading life assurance organization in the Dominion. Once more it leads the field among Canadian Companies in each of the following respects:

Largest New Business. Largest Business in Force. Largest Assets.
Largest Surplus Earnings. Largest Net Surplus. Largest Income.
Largest Distribution of Life Assurance Benefits.

THE YEAR'S RESULTS

The following large and uniform increases registered during the year 1916 clearly demonstrate the strength of the Company's position and the confidence and prestige it enjoys in the public mind:

	1916	1915	INCREASE
Assets as at December 31st	$82,948,996	$74,326,423	$8,622,573 (11.6%)
Cash Income	18,439,131	15,972,652	2,526,459 (15.8%)
Surplus paid or allotted to Policyholders.	1,110,900	955,487	125,413 (12.7%)
Net Surplus as at December 31st.	8,509,865	7,515,501	964,274 (12.8%)
Total Payments to Policyholders.	7,578,016	7,129,479	448,537 (6.3%)
Assurances Issued and Paid for in Cash.	42,772,295	34,873,861	7,898,445 (22.6%)
Assurances in Force	281,434,700	267,404,100	24,030,540 (9.3%)

Coincident with the above increases, the Company succeeded during the year in effecting a substantial and important reduction in the ratio of expense, a feature which favourably affects earnings on policyholders' account.

THE PRINCE OF GRAUSTARK

"By the way, do you happen to know a Miss Blithers—Maud Blith-ers?"

Miss Guile frowned reflectively.
"Blithers? The name is a familiar

A half dozen unoccupied chairs were cluttered about, having been abandoned by persons who overestimated their hardness. One of the stewards was engaged in stacking them up and making them fast.

Miss Guile's chair and that of Mrs.
Gaston were stanchly fastened down and their rugs were in place. R.
Schmidt experienced an exquisite sense of pleasure. Here was a perfect exemplification of that much abused thing known as circumstantial evidence. She contemplated coming on deck. So he had his chair put in place, called for his rug, shrugged his chin down into the collar of his thick ulster and sat down to wait.

She literally was blown into his presence. He sprang to his feet to check her swift approach before she could be dashed against the wall or upon the heap of chairs in the corner.
She uttered an excited little shriek as she came bang up against him and found his ready arms closing about her shoulders.

"Oh, goodness!" she gasped, with what little breath she had left, and then began to laugh as she freed herself in confusion—a very pretty confusion, he recalled later on, after he had recovered to some extent from the effects of an exceedingly severe bump on the back of his head. "How awkward!"

"Not at all," he proclaimed, retaining a grip on one of her arms until the ship showed some signs of resuming its way eastward instead of downward.

"I am sure it must have hurt dreadfully," she cried. "Nothing hurts worse than a bump. It seemed as though you must have splintered the wall."

"I have a singularly hard head," said he, and forthwith felt of the back of it.

"Will you please stand ready to receive boarders? My maid is following me, poor thing, and I can't afford to have her smashed to pieces. Here she is!"

Quite a pretty maid, with wide,
horrified eyes and a pale green complexion came hustling around the corner. R. Schmidt, albeit a prince, received her with open arms.

"Merci, m'sieur!" she squealed and added something in muffled French that strangely reminded him of what Hobbs had said in English. Then she deposited an armful of rugs and magazines at Robin's feet and clutched wildly at a post actually some ten feet away, but which appeared to be coming toward her with obliging swiftness, so nicely was the deck rotating for her. "Mon dieu! Mon dieu!"

"You may go back to bed, Marie,"
cried her mistress in some haste.

"But ze rug, I feex it," groaned the unhappy maid, and then once more,
"Merci, m'sieur!" She clung to the arm he extended and tried bravely to smile her thanks.

"Here! Go in through this door," he said, bracing the door open with his elbow. "You'll be all right in a little while. Keep your nerve." He closed the door after her and turned to the amused Miss Guile. "Well, it's an ill wind that blows no good," he said enigmatically, and she flushed under the steady smile in his eyes. "Allow me to arrange your rug for you,

two were sweethearts who managed to thrive on the smallest of comforts.

At last his patience was rewarded.
She lowered the magazine and stifled
a yawn—but not a real one.

"Have you read it?" she inquired composedly.

"A part of it," he said. "Over your shoulder."

"Is that considered polite in Vienna?"

"If you only knew what a bump I've got on the back of my head you wouldn't be so ungracious," he said.

"I couldn't possibly know, could I?"
He leaned forward and indicated the spot on the back of his head, first removing his cap. She laughed nervously, and then gently rubbed her fingers
over the thick hair.

"There is a dreadful lump!" she exclaimed. "Oh, how sorry I am. Do—do you feel faint or—or—I mean, is it very painful?"

"Not now," he replied, replacing his cap and favoring her with his most engaging smile.

She smiled in response, betraying not the slightest sign of embarrassment.

"Am I to regard you as a hero?"

"If you will be so kind, please."

She laughed outright at this. "I think I rather like you, Mr. Schmidt," she said, with unexpected candor.

"Oh, I fancy I'm not at all bad," said
he, after a momentary stare of astonishment. "I am especially good in rough weather," he went on, trying to forget that he was a prince of the royal blood, a rather difficult matter when one stops to consider he was not in the habit of hearing people say that they rather liked him.

"Do your friends come from Vienna?" she inquired abruptly.

"Yes," he said, and then saved his face as usual by adding under his breath, "but they don't live there." It was not in him to lie outright; hence the handy way of appeasing his conscience.

"They are very interesting looking men, especially the younger. I cannot remember when I have seen a more attractive man."

"He is a splendid chap," exclaimed Robin, with genuine enthusiasm. "I am very fond of Dank."

She was silent for a moment. Something had failed, and she was rather glad of it.

"Do you like New York?" she asked.
"Immensely. I met a great many delightful people there, Miss Guile.
You say you do not know the Blithers family? Mr. Blithers is a rare old bird."

"Isn't there some talk of his daughter being engaged to the Prince of Graustark?"

He felt that his ears were red. "The newspapers hinted at something of the sort, I believe." He was suddenly possessed by the curious notion that he was being "pumped" by his fair companion. Indeed, a certain insistent note had crept into her voice, and her eyes were searching his with an intensity that had not appeared in them until now.

"Have you seen him?"

"The prince?"

"Yes. What is he like?"

"I've seen pictures of him." he

"I've heard so much about her lately. She is the daughter of William Blithers, the great capitalist."

"Oh, I know who he is," she exclaimed. "Perfect roodles of money, hasn't he?"

"Roodles?"

"Loads, if it means more to you. I forgot that you are a foreigner. He gave that wonderful ball last week for the Prince of—of—oh, some insignificant place over in Europe. There are such a lot of queer duchies and principalities, don't you know? It is quite impossible to tell one from the other. They don't even appear on the maps."

He took it with a perfectly straight face, though secretly annoyed. "It was the talk of the town, that ball. It must have cost roodles of money. Is that right?"

"Yes, but it doesn't sound right when you say it. Naturally one doesn't say roodles in Vienna."

"We say noodles," said he. "I am very fond of them. But to resume. I supposed every one in New York knew Miss Blithers. She's quite the rage, I'm told."

"Indeed? I should think she might be, Mr. Schmidt, with all those lovely millions behind her."

He smiled introspectively. "Yes, and I am told that in spite of them she is the prettiest girl in New York."

She appeared to lose interest in the topic. "Oh, indeed?"

"But," he supplemented gracefully, "it isn't true."

"What isn't true?"

"The statement that she is the prettiest girl in New York."

"How can you say that when you admit you've never seen her?"

"I can say it with a perfectly clear conscience, Miss Guile," said he and was filled with delight when she bit her lip as a sign of acknowledgment.

"Oh, here comes the tea!" she cried, with a strange eagerness in her voice. "I am so glad." She scrambled gracefully out of her rug and arose to her feet.

"Aren't you going to have some?" he cried.

"Yes," she said quite pointedly. "In my room, Mr. Schmidt." And before he could get to his feet she was moving away without so much as a nod or smile for him.

The following day was as unlike its predecessor as black is like white. During the night the smooth gray pond had been transformed into a turbulent, storm thrashed ocean. Only the hardest of the passengers ventured on deck.

R. Schmidt, being a good sailor and a hardy young chap, albeit a prince of royal blood, was abroad early. He took two turns about the deck, and each time as he passed the spot he sent a covert glance into the corner where Miss Guile's chair was standing. Of course he did not expect to find her there in weather like this, but—well, he looked, and that is the end to the argument.

Quinnox and Dank were hopelessly bedridden, so to speak. They were very disagreeable, cross and unpleasant, and somehow he felt that they hated their cheerful, happy faced prince.

At last the young man battled his way down the deck and soon found himself in the well protected corner.

an ill wind that blows no good," he said enigmatically, and she flushed, under the steady smile in his eyes. "Allow me to arrange your rug for you, Miss Guile."

"Thank you, no. I think I would rather go inside. It is really too windy!"

"The wind can't get at you back here in this cubbyhole," he protested. "Do sit down. I'll have you as snug as a bug in a rug before you can say Jack Robinson. See! Now stick 'em out and I'll wrap it around them. There! You're as neatly done up as a mummy and a good deal better off, because you are a long way short of being 2,000 years old."

"How is your head, Mr. Schmidt?" she inquired, with grave concern. "You seem to be quite crazy. I hope!"

"Every one is a little bit mad, don't you think, especially in moments of great excitement. I daresay my head has been turned quite appreciably, and I'm glad that you've been kind enough to notice it. Where is Mrs. Gaston?" He was vastly exhilarated.

She regarded him with eyes that sparkled and belied the unamiable nature of her reply.

"The poor lady is where she is not at all likely to be annoyed, Mr. Schmidt."

Then she took up a magazine and coolly began to run through the pages. He waited for a moment, considerably dashed, and then said, "Oh," in a very unfriendly manner. She found her place in the magazine, assumed a more comfortable position and with noteworthy resolution set about reading as if her life depended upon it.

CHAPTER X.

A Prince's Heart at Stake.

THE prince sat down, pulled the rug up to his chin and stared out at the great, heaving billows. Suddenly remembering another injury, he felt once more of the back of his head.

"By jove!" he exclaimed. "There is a lump there."

"I can't hear you," she said, allowing the magazine to drop into her lap, but keeping her place carefully marked with one of her fingers.

"I can hear you perfectly," he said.

"It's the way the wind blows," she explained.

"Easily remedied," said he. "I'll move into Mrs. Gaston's chair if you think it will help any."

"Do!" she said promptly. "You will not disturb me in the least—unless you talk." She resumed her reading, half a page above the finger tip.

He moved over and arranged himself comfortably, snugly in Mrs. Gaston's chair. Their elbows almost met. He was prepared to be very patient. For a long time she continued to read, her warm, rosy cheek half averted, her eyes applied to their task with irritating constancy. He did not despair. Some wise person once had told him that it was only necessary to give a woman sufficient time and she would be the one to despair.

A few passengers possessed of proud sea legs staggered past the snug couple on their ridiculous rounds of the ship. If they thought of Miss Guile and R. Schmidt at all it was with the scorn that is usually devoted to youth at its very best. There could be no doubt in the passing mind that these

"Have you seen him?"

"The prince?"

"Yes. What is he like?"

"I've seen pictures of him," he equivocated. "Rather nice looking. I should say."

"Of course he is like all foreign noblemen and will leap at the Blithers millions if he gets the chance. I sometimes feel sorry for the poor wretches." There was more scorn than pity in the way she said it, however, and her velvety eyes were suddenly hard and uncompromising.

He longed to defend himself, in the third person, but could not do so for very strong and obvious reasons. He allowed himself the privilege, however, of declaring that foreign noblemen are not always as black as they are painted. And then, for a very excellent reason, he contrived to change the subject by asking where she was going on the continent.

"I may go to Vienna," she said, with a smile that served to puzzle rather than to delight him. He was more than ever convinced that she was playing with him. "But pray do not look so gloomy, Mr. Schmidt, I shall not make any demands upon your time while I am there. You may!"

"I am quite sure of that," he interrupted, with his ready smile. "You see, I am a person of no consequence in Vienna, while you— Ah, well, as an American girl you will be hobnobbing with the nobility while the humble Schmidt sits afar off and marvels at the kindness of a fate that befell him in the middle of the Atlantic ocean, and yet curses the fate that makes him unworthy of the slightest notice from the aforesaid American girl. For, I daresay, Miss Guile, you, like all American girls, are ready to leap at titles."

"That really isn't fair, Mr. Schmidt," she protested, flushing. "Why should you and I quarrel over a condition that cannot apply to either of us? You are not a nobleman, and I am not a title seeking American girl. So, why all this beautiful irony?"

"It only remains for me to humbly beg your pardon and to add that if you come to Vienna my every waking hour shall be devoted to the pleasure of!"

"I am sorry I mentioned it, Mr. Schmidt," she interrupted coldly. "You may rest easy, for I shall not keep you awake for a single hour. Besides, I may not go to Vienna at all."

"I am sure you would like Vienna," he said, somewhat chilled by her manner.

"I have been there with my parents, but it was a long time ago. I once saw the emperor, and often have I seen the wonderful Prince Lichtenstein."

"Have you traveled extensively in Europe?"

She was smiling once more. "I don't know what you would consider extensively," she said. "I was educated in Paris, I have spent innumerable winters in Rome and quite as many summers in Scotland, England, Switzerland, Germ—"

"I know who you are!" he cried out enthusiastically. To his amazement a startled expression leaped into her eyes. "You are traveling under an assumed name." She remained perfectly still, watching him with an anxious smile on her lips. "You are no other than Miss Baedeker, the well known authoress."

impotence. It was clear that he could

Robin picked up the Marconigram and calmly smoothed out the crinslowly and with extreme disgust in his fine young face. It was a lengthy communication from Baron Romano,

the prime minister in Edelweiss:

When she appeared on deck long afterward she found every chair occupied. A warm sun, a far from tur-had brought about a marvelous transformation.

She made several brisk rounds of through half closed lids. Suddenly she threw off her rug with a brief remark to her companion, arose and went to her cabin. Mrs. Gaston followed, not from choice, but because the brief remark formed a command.

Soon afterward R. Schmidt, who had been joined by Dank, threw himself into his chair with a great sigh of fatigue and said:

"Gad, I've walked a hundred miles since breakfast. Have you a match?"

"Hobbs has made a very curious discovery," said the young lieutenant, producing his matchbox. There was a perturbed look in his eyes.

"If Hobbs isn't careful he'll discover a new continent one of these days. He is always discovering something,"
said Robin, puffing away at his pipe.

"But this is really interesting. It seems that he was in the hold when Miss Guile's maid came down to get

"Now listen to me, and I'll tell you why I believe—yes, actually believe him to be the"— "Marie do you hear me?" Miss Guile shook her vigorously. "Wake up! It isn't a nightmare. Now listen!"

CHAPTER XI. The Lieutenant Receives Orders.

THE next day brought not only an agreeable change in the weather, but a most surprising alteration in the manner of Mrs. Gaston, whose attitude toward R. Schmidt and his friends had been anything but amicable up to the hour of Miss Guile's discovery. The excellent lady, recovering very quickly from her indisposition, became positively polite to the hitherto repugnant Mr. Schmidt. She melted so abruptly and so completely that the young man was vaguely troubled. He began to wonder if his incognito had been pierced, so to speak.

He forbore asking when Miss Guile might be expected to appear on deck for her constitutional, but she volunteered the information, which was neither vague nor yet definite. In fact, she said that Miss Guile would be up soon.

Now it is necessary to relate that Miss Guile had been particularly firm in her commands to Mrs. Gaston. In the first place, Mrs. Gaston was given to understand that she was not to breathe it to a soul that R. Schmidt was not R. Schmidt, and she was not to betray to him by word or sign that he was suspected of being the Prince of Graustark. Moreover, the exacting Miss Guile laid great stress upon another command—R. Schmidt was never to know that she was not Miss Guile, but some one else altogether.

"You're right, my dear," exclaimed Mrs. Gaston in an excited whisper as she burst in upon her fair companion, who was having coffee and toast in her parlor. Marie, the maid, was waiting to do up her mistress' hair, and the young lady herself was alluringly charming in spite of the fact that it was not already "done up." "He is the—er—he is just what you think."

"Good heavens, you haven't gone and done it, have you?" cried the girl, a slim hand halting with a piece of toast halfway to her lips.

"Gone and done it?" "You haven't been blabbing, have you?"

"How can you say that to me? Am I not to be trusted? Am I so weak and?"

"Don't cry, you old dear! Forgive me. But now tell me—absolutely—just what you've been up to," and Mrs. Gaston repeated every word of the conversation she had had with R. Schmidt, proving absolutely nothing.

had brought about a marvelous transformation.

She made several brisk rounds of the deck, then, feeling that people were following her with their eyes—admiringly, to be sure, but what of that?—she abandoned the pleasant exercise and sought the seclusion of the sunless corner where her chair was stationed. The ship's daily newspaper was just off the press, and many of the loungers were reading the brief telegraphic news from the capitals of the world. She procured a copy of the paper from a steward and was glancing at the headlines as she made her way into her corner. Double leaded type appeared over the rumored engagement of Miss Maud Applegate Blithers, the beautiful and accomplished daughter of the great capitalist, and Robin, prince of Graustark. A queer little smile played about her lips as she folded the paper for future perusal. Turning the corners of the deck building, she almost collided with R. Schmidt, who stood leaning against the wall, scanning the little newspaper with eyes that were blind to everything else.

"Oh!" she gasped. "I'm sorry," he exclaimed, crumpling the paper in his hand as he backed away, flushing. "Stupid of me. Good morning."

"Good morning, Mr. Schmidt. It wasn't your fault. I should have looked where I was going. I see you have a paper. It appears that Miss Blithers and the prince are to be married after all."

"Yes, it is quite apparent that the Blithers family wants a title at any cost," he said.

Her eyes flashed with amusement at his reply.

"Would you like to take a few turns around the deck, Miss Guile?" he inquired, a trace of nervousness in his manner.

Before deciding she shot an investigating glance into the corner. Mrs. Gaston was not only there, but was engaged in conversation with the gray mustached gentleman in a nearby chair. It required but half a glance to show that Mr. Totten was unmistakably interested in something the voluble lady had just said to him.

"No, thank you, Mr. Schmidt," said Miss Guile hastily, and then hurried over to her chair, a distinct cloud on her smooth brow. Robin, considering himself dismissed, whirled and went his way, a dark flush spreading over his face. Never in all his life had he been quite so out of patience with the world as on this bright, sunny morning.

"Here comes Mr. Schmidt," whispered Mrs. Gaston excitedly a few moments later and at once made a movement indicative of hasty departure.

"Sit still," said Miss Guile peremptorily.

R. Schmidt again passed them by without so much as a glance in their direction. There was a very sweet smile on Miss Guile's lips as she closed her eyes and lay back in her chair. Once, twice, thrice, even as many as six times R. Schmidt strode rapidly by their corner, his head high and his face aglow.

At last a queer little pucker appeared on the serene brow of the far from drowsy young lady whose eyes peeped

"I should say because her name begins with a B," said Robin shortly.

"In that case it isn't Guile."

"Obviously." The young man was thinking very hard.

"And if it isn't Guile there must be an excellent reason for her sailing under a false name."

Jewels on an Idol.

The jewels of an Indian idol must be worth stealing if many of those remarkably hideous images possess such valuable head ornaments as one made for the idol Parthasathy, in the Triplicane temple in Madras. The ornament is worth some 50,000 rupees and is made of sovereign gold studded with diamonds, emeralds and rubies, the largest emerald being valued at 1,000 rupees and the biggest ruby and diamond at 300 rupees apiece.

SELECTING SEED CORN.

Are you going to wait till spring to pick out seed ears for your next corn crop? Although this may be a custom, the experience of the most successful growers shows that seed selected from standing corn in the fall yields more than corn taken from the shock or crib. By fall selection the best ears growing under ordinary conditions may be chosen. By selecting seed either at husking time or from the crib the grower picks out ears that grow on unusually fertile spots or often with a single plant in a hill. The Ohio experiment station has obtained gains in yield of more than three bushels per acre by selecting seed in the fall from standing corn.

RAISING DRUG PLANTS.

Culture Is a Distinct Specialty and Not Generally Profitable.

[Prepared by United States department of agriculture.]

Although many drugs, spices and oils consumed in this country in large amounts in the aggregate have risen abnormally in price because war conditions have interfered with their importation, it does not follow, drug plant specialists of the United States department of agriculture are pointing out, that profit will accrue to any one who may undertake to produce the drug plants domestically. The culture of such plants is as distinct a specialty as the growing of choice flowers to supply the fancy floral trade. It is questionable whether persons even highly skilled in producing staple crops could acquire easily the special knowledge necessary to the successful production of drug plants.

Of even greater importance, however, is the fact that the total amount of drug plants that can be consumed in this country in any year is very small compared with our consumption of any of the staple crops. Overproduction in the case of drugs is more serious than in the case of staple crops because staple crops such as corn and grain if not sold can be used at home for food or for feeding stock or chickens. The drug plant, however, is profitless to the grower unless a drug manufacturer will buy it for use in medicine.

CORNSTALK DISEASES.

Rotation of Corn Advocated by Iowa Experiment Station.

Diseases of cornstalks and roots cost Iowa millions annually. That is the reason the Iowa experiment station recently published a bulletin on cornstalks and corn root disease. The station discovered a new disease which is characterized by falling of corn where the stalks were broken close to the joints. Such plants contained only small ears or they were barren. When a farmer's attention was called to this condition the statement was usually made that the stalks were blown over by the

NEW STRENGTH FOR LAME BACK.

Letter Tells of Long-looked-for Prescription.

Dear Mr. Editor—I suffered from lame back and a constant tired, worn-out feeling. At times I was unable to stand erect and scarcely able to get around. It would usually come on at first with crick in small of my back. I took one box of Dr. Pierce's Anuric Tablets and my back commenced to get better soon after starting to take them. I did not have to walk doubled over as I did before using the "Anuric." It is the best remedy I have ever taken for what it is intended to relieve.

I hope those who are in need of such a remedy will give the "Anuric Tablets" a trial.

(Signed) A. G. DRAKE.

NOTE: Up to this time, "Anuric" has not been on sale to the public, but by the persuasion of many patients and the increased demand for this wonderful healing tablet, Doctor Pierce has finally decided to put it into the drug stores of this country within immediate reach of all sufferers.

Simply ask for Doctor Pierce's Anuric Tablets. There can be no imitation. Every package of "Anuric" is sure to be Doctor Pierce's. You will find the signature on the package just as you do on Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription, the ever-famous friend to ailing women, and Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery, proven by years to be the greatest general tonic. Send 10 cents to Dr. V. M. Pierce, Buffalo, N. Y., for large trial package.

At any rate don't give up hope of being cured of your malady until just a few doses of "Anuric" have proven that it will make you feel like a different person.

SOWING ALFALFA.

Does Not Need to Be Sown Very Deep, But Ground Needs Good Plowing.

[M. A. Beeson, Oklahoma station.]

In preparing the seed bed for alfalfa you should begin a year or two before you wish to seed by planting a cultivated crop, keeping the ground well cultivated and free from weeds. Corn is a good crop to precede alfalfa.

The critical period of alfalfa is the first six weeks of the life of the plant. The ground should be plowed early and deep. It should be free from weeds and as free as possible from

Making the Little Farm Pay

By C. C. BOWSFIELD

Uniformity in egg production, as regards size and color, is a demand which buyers are making of chicken owners. One difficulty in handling country produce is carelessness in packing and shipping. In regard to eggs, many farmers lose money by having mongrel flocks, so that the product lacks uniformity in size and color.

This condition in connection with carelessness about the prompt gathering of eggs causes a loss of many millions of dollars annually. For one thing farmers get less for their eggs than they would if the product was guaranteed and had a nice appearance. In the next place dealers and consumers would be saved vexation and loss if they could depend on the quality of the eggs marketed.

To place the poultry business on a paying basis is not beyond the capacity of any intelligent boy or girl, either in the suburbs or on a farm. A reputation for supplying the right kind of edibles can soon be established. Shape up the flock of chickens to some standard and there will be a gain in more ways than one.

When an owner begins to clear money from extra nice eggs and poultry he finds a demand for all the pullets and cockerels that he can spare. Other people wish them for breeding purposes, as they also are aiming for the best results. After following the uniformity plan for one or two seasons owners can fix a high price for everything they have to sell. Thus

WEDDING SHOW

Novel Ideas About What Betrothed Girl.

After an engagement he announced the girl's friends some kind of shower, which was clever and unusual. A linen shower is to stretch where in the house and pin it. After all the guests the guest of honor is given clothes hamper and escorted to room where the "wash" is told to take it in.

There was great fun in kitchen shower when one dressed like a real southern belle appeared with a small pusher with tinware. Over her blouse she wore a hat made from a trimmed with a dish towel brush. At her waist dangled a line made of patty-pans, a nutmeg grater, etc. A sewing club entertained attention was called to this condition the statement was usually made that the stalks were blown over by the wind or that the trouble was caused by the corn root louse or corn root worm.

The disease attacks roots, stalks and the ears. It has not been determined whether all of these diseases are caused by the same organism or not. In many fields the corn was broken off just below or above the joint. The pith or soft material in the cornstalks was destroyed and was brownish or in some cases reddish in color. The fibers were soft and easily broken off. The station discovered three kinds of molds attacking the kernels, husks and cobs.

The only rational treatment is rotation of corn. Corn should never follow corn where this disease exists, since the fungus remains where the corn is planted in the same field the next year. Young plants will become infected. It is a wise plan to treat corn with formalin at the rate of one pint to forty-five gallons of water for fifteen minutes.

The Iowa station received numerous complaints last year in regard to a disease in cattle which goes under the name of cornstalk disease, or forage poisoning. It was so severe that some veterinarians advised not to feed cornstalks. While it is not known that the fungus here described is connected with this disease in cattle, due to feeding on moldy corn and fodder, there are good grounds for believing that these molds are toxic.

For Dipping Hogs.

This is the cement constructed hog dipping vat recommended by the Wisconsin experiment station. It has a chute at either end, and there is a return drain apron at the end where the hogs come up out of the dip. By holding them on this incline for a few minutes a great deal of the dip is saved by running off them and into the tank. The vat proper is sixteen inches wide at the bottom, twenty-four inches wide at the top and four feet deep. It is ten feet long.

Weeds Use Water.

A large weed may use as much as a barrel of water. A plant weighing one pound when dried has used up 700 to 800 pounds of water in making its growth or seventy to eighty gallons, making nearly two barrels. From this it is plain that cutting down weeds is a very good way of saving moisture for the crop.

Somewhat Different.

SOWING ALFALFA WITH GRAIN DRILL.

weed seed. It should be well tilled, but firm up to the surface when seeded. Subpacking with a disk harrow with disks set straight is an excellent practice. Fall seeding in September without a nurse crop is considered the surest method to follow. However, if there is not a favorable season and sufficient moisture in the fall you may sow at corn planting time in spring.

From twelve to fifteen pounds of seed per acre are ample if the seed is clean and strong. When it is sown with a grain drill attachment on well prepared seed bed and when sown carefully and not too deep, from ten to twelve pounds of seed are quite sufficient. The seed is small and does not need to be sown too deep, just so you get it into the moist dirt.

The Dodder Parasite.

Dodder is usually introduced in seed, such as alfalfa. The seed of dodder germinates at the same time as the alfalfa. It sends up its stem, which twines around the young alfalfa plants; then it sends its roots into the alfalfa, and from that time on it is a parasite, living entirely on the alfalfa.

If there is much dodder present it soon kills out the alfalfa. It spreads entirely by the seed. If dodder is general all over the field the best thing to do is to plow it up and plant to some cultivated crop, such as corn, for two or three seasons, when it may again satisfactorily be seeded to alfalfa. If dodder occurs only in patches the best thing to do is to mow the patches before the dodder forms seed. The crop should be left on the field and burned as soon as it becomes dry. If the growth is very small it may be necessary to scatter on some straw before burning. These patches if killed by burning can be started again with alfalfa the same way as the original field.

In the control of dodder the best thing to do is not to introduce it in seeds which are planted on the farm. It will not grow on corn or any of the common cultivated plants on the farm. —Oklahoma Station.

Frozen Vegetables.

Frozen vegetables should never be fed to live stock while they are frozen, but may be used either raw or cooked as soon as the frost is thawed out of them. They must be used up in a very short time, however, or they will decay and become worthless.

uniformity plan for one or two seasons owners can fix a high price for everything they have to sell. Thus there is a strong inducement at every turn to handle poultry intelligently and according to business principles.

An owner who has earned a reputation for having a money making flock of pure bred chickens can frequently sell individual birds at $10 to $50, sometimes as high as $100 or even $200. Then there is a chance to supply nice, large juicy broilers which will weigh a pound and a half to two pounds at the age of eight weeks. This is easily done with the American breeds. One never gets the quality too high. When a first class general purpose type of pure bred chickens has been decided on begin selecting a vigorous line of laying hens. Note the healthfulness and other good qualities of those fowls which are in the lead as egg producers. Use their eggs for hatching purposes and keep up this work of selection among the pullets, discarding all those which are puny or sickly or which do not seem to come up to standard in vigor and shapely appearance. As soon as chicks show capacity to shift for themselves and use the ordinary feeds, say at the end of two months, separate the cockerels from the pullets and give particular attention to how the latter are brought along to maturity. Without any particular forcing process pullets that are intended for egg production and breeding stock should be kept growing in a vigorous way. This means cleanliness, regular feeding and good housing. They are not to have range on wet grounds, but in dry weather ought to have considerable freedom.

Having secured a flock of healthy, contented chickens of some good strain in a recognized breed, there will be little trouble about lack of uniformity in eggs. The product will gradually become uniform in size and color by following this course of management. The selection of the best pullets from year to year is just about as important as the breeding to one particular strain.

It does not matter at all whether the eggs are white or brown. There is a ready sale for both kinds, but they must not be mixed. It has come about that drug stores use enormous quantities of eggs at their soda fountains, and these buyers, like all others, dislike very much to have them in different sizes and colors standing around before customers. Clubs and hotels are equally particular, because this lack of uniformity shows a carelessness or indifference on the part of poultry owners. A lot of uniform eggs bearing that exquisite bloom that goes with them when they are fresh will go far toward making a reputation for the producer.

HOW TO KEEP WELL

BY JOHN W. S. McCULLOUGH, M.D., D.P.H., CHIEF OFFICER OF THE PROVINCIAL BOARD OF HEALTH.

TYPHOID FEVER is a severe disease coming on with headache, rise of temperature, diarrhoea, and abdominal distention. It always occurs as the result of taking into one's stomach food or drink contaminated with the body discharges. These discharges may enter one's mouth in water which has been polluted with sewage containing typhoid germs, with milk or food to which the germs have been carried by flies, by dirty hands, by dirty water, etc., or by direct contact with a person ill of typhoid fever. It is also distributed by "carriers," that is by persons who, though immune to the disease themselves, carry the germs of the disease in their intestines and transmit it to others through the discharges reaching food, etc. "Typhoid Mary," TYPHOID FEVER the New York cook who gave the disease to a large number of people before she was locked up, is a typhoid example of a typhoid carrier. People who have typhoid fever may carry the disease for a long time and be a source of danger to others, especially if they have anything to do with the preparation of food.

Typhoid fever is rather common about the farms especially if a single case has occurred in a neighborhood where there is any chance of the general water supply, such as a spring, stream, or lake, receiving the intestinal discharges of the sick person. A typical example of this occurred in connection with an outbreak of the disease at Plymouth, Pa., in 1885.
Plymouth is a mining town with a population at the time of the outbreak of about 8,000. Its water-supply was obtained from a mountain stream draining an almost uninhabited watershed, and the water for the town was impounded in a series of four impounding reservoirs. In January a man living up stream, who had spent his Christmas holidays in Philadelphia, became ill at his home. The excreta were not disinfected but were thrown either into the frozen creek or upon its snow-covered banks. In March there came a spring thaw and the accumulations of excreta were washed down the stream. Three weeks later there was an acute outbreak of typhoid fever in the little town. In some days as many as 100 cases occurred. One thousand and four cases were reported. There were, it is estimated, altogether 1,500 cases and the deaths numbered 114. The infection was most marked in those who used the town water supply, the epidemic being limited to the users of this water. Those who used well water escaped the disease. This epidemic of typhoid was studied and definitely traced to its source by competent observers, and is a marked example of the necessity of protection of public water supplies.

We are not exempt from such lessons in Ontario. The outbreak of typhoid in Ottawa in 1911 and again in 1913, and that of the town of Sarnia in 1911-12, all of which were proven to have occurred as the result of sewage-polluted water, have been sharp lessons in our own province, lessons unhappily which have not yet convinced the respective civic authorities of the necessity of adequate protection of their water-supplies.

In the majority of cases the well is the chief and usually the only source of water supply. It is in many cases a safe supply, especially if it is a deep or driven well and more particularly if it is well protected against surface drainage. But many farm wells are shallow with the curb made of unpainted timber or stone which allow of easy drainage to the well. The covering is often of loose boards through which surface impurities may easily run. The danger is slight unless the impurities contain, which they may easily do, the excreta of persons carelessly thrown upon the ground.
If the excreta comes from a person affected with typhoid the danger is imminent, and there is almost a certainty that users of the water will suffer from the disease. The moral is plain: PROTECT THE WELL!

Summer Diarrhoea kills a large number of babies every summer. It is preventable if care is taken with the babies' food. If at all severe call the doctor at once. In any case it is always safe to give a dose of the good old-fashioned castor oil. That is one of the mother remedies to be banked upon. If the diarrhoea is severe cut off all food, especially MILK, which is death to a baby with diarrhoea, but give boiled water in as large amounts as the baby would have of food. In older children give only water and gruel or dry toast. But get a doctor at once.

swered from time to time.

England's one observed at New-ark parish church, called "ringing for gofer." This custom, which has lasted for over 300 years, arose through a wealthy merchant named Gofer losing himself one October night in the forest that then surrounded Newark. He carried much money, and the forest was infested with thieves. Suddenly he heard the sound of Newark bells and was guided safely home by their music. To commemorate his escape Gofer left a goodly sum for Newark bell ringers on condition that they "rang for Gofer" every year on Sunday nights in October and November.

Mule Riding In Portugal.

In odd contrast to the modern rush and honk of the automobile and the clang of the trolley cars are the saloips or small farmers of Portugal, who ride nonchalantly through the twentieth century hubbub on the back—the extreme back—of small, patient eyed mules. Though the country has progressed and the farmers are progressing toward prosperity, they have consistently refused to move farther forward on the mule's back in Portugal than the last fifth of his anatomy. Perhaps the custom arose from the time when the mule carried a large load just before the rider and the habit has not been broken.—Christian Herald.

Custom In Spain.

One thing specially is vital in Spain: "Costumbre," they say ("It is the custom"). It explains commercial honor tersely for the Spanish business man to keep his word and pay his bills: exactly as it is equally customary for him to lack what we call "honor" in some other departments of life. It is customary to do or not to do, to like or not to like, a thousand things. Why? "Costumbre" is the only reply. It is customary, moreover, not to yield readily to an improvement or a luxury, even as it is again equally customary, once the Spaniard has yielded to a given thing, to hold to it like adamant.—Exchange.

His mother urged him to be more tidy, and his father scolded; but, after all, it was a little ant that made a better boy of Jimmy.

He was sitting on the porch one evening feeling very sleepy and wishing he could get out of taking the bath that his mother always insisted upon before he crawled into his soft bed.

Jimmy had been nodding several times when he felt his head go around, and before he knew what to think he had slipped down to the ground in front of the porch steps and was looking right into the eyes of a little black ant.

"Hello, Jimmy?" the ant said. "Going to pay us a visit, are you?"

Jimmy didn't say a word, but the ant took hold of one arm and began to hurry him along through a forest of grass. Jimmy, looking up, saw the clover blossoms nodding like tail palms over his head.

The ant whisked Jimmy over to the ant hill near the gate. On top of it sat an ant combing its hair.

"Just show this lad how to comb that mop of his," said the ant who was in charge of Jimmy.

They hustled Jimmy down on the ant hill, and then the ant raised its foot. Jimmy saw a coarse comb on it. It went through his hair very gently. Then it used a finer comb also on the foot.

The ants' bodies were covered with short hair, and when an ant came out of the hill there were sometimes specks of earth on its coat, although the hallways in the ant hill are lined with earth packed down very hard.

When the ant got out into the air it would hurriedly comb off the earth or sponge its body with its tongue.

"If you lived in this ant hill, young man," one of the ants said, "we'd teach you to keep clean. You have soap and brushes and sponges and fresh cloths and towels and a nice tub of water, while we have only our tongues and the combs and brushes we carry with us."

Just then a half dozen ants came hurrying out of the hill. They hung themselves up in the funniest way by their hind feet to a blade of grass, while two of their companions combed dropped off to sleep. As Jimmy began to feel sleepy, he fell asleep, too, and when he awoke he found himself in the chair on the porch.

Naming Lion Cubs.

An Early Street Cleaner.

"One day," Ben Franklin wrote in his autobiography, "I found a poor, industrious man who was willing to undertake keeping the pavement clean by sweeping it twice a week, carrying off the dirt from before all the neighbors' doors for the sum of 6 pence per month to be paid by each house. I then wrote and printed a paper setting forth the advantages to the neighborhood that might be obtained by this small expense. I sent one of these papers to each house and in a day or two went around to see who would subscribe an agreement to pay these sixpences. It was unanimously signed and for a time well executed. This raised a general desire to have all the streets paved and made the people more willing to submit to a tax for that purpose."

In the February issue of Rod and Gun, now on the news-stands, Bonnycastle Dale, the naturalist writer describes in "Hunting with the Modern Camera" the methods by which he gets near enough to the forest birds and beasts to take some of the remarkable photographs with which his stories are illustrated. "The only danger is from falls and falling trees," he says. "There is not anything in the woods of North America that will attack you if unmolested." "The Woodduck," by F. V. Williams, supplements the cover picture for this month which reproduces in colors that are true to life this rarely beautiful and comparatively scarce species of duck. "Old Frying Pan," a bear story by H. C. Hadden. "Hawks and Other Game Destroyers" by Reginald Gourlay. TO MEET THE HIGH COST OF LIVING.

The Canadian Northern Railway has inaugurated a system in its Dining Cars designed to meet the requirements of the traveller desiring a moderate meal. Table D'Hote prices: breakfast 25c., 30c., 65c.; luncheon, 35c., 50c., 75c., 80c.; dinner, 50c., 75c., 85c., $1.00. More elaborate meals may be had A La Carte if desired.

Passengers are supplied with menu cards about thirty minutes before each meal is called, from which it may be ascertained what dishes will be served, and the cost of same.

The steward will be pleased to give any information and offer suggestions if required.

This system has been in effect for a short time only, but it has been patronized to such an extent as to ensure the complete success of the scheme.

Another original feature introduced on all its Transcontinental Trains is a "Travellers' Shop" in charge of the porter in the Observation Cars.

The stock consists of a complete list of articles the traveller is likely to forget, or overlook, in packing up for the trip, or might desire to purchase as an afterthought. Everything from shoe laces and collar buttons to smelling salts and bon-bons are obtainable.

The patrons of the road have already shown an enthusiastic appreciation of these, two of the many original features characteristic of the progressive policy under which the C. N. R. operates.

helpless jackets, 34 sets of pyjamas, 11 hot water bottle covers, 31 dozen pairs of socks, 2 quilts, 3 pillows, 5 wash cloths and several News from Home.

The Society acknowledges with thanks, one pair of pillows from Mrs.
(Dr.) Edwards and several "News from Home" from Miss Jessie McBean and Miss Mary E. Scott, Violet.

A letter was received last week from Mrs. Clarence Warner, Boston, enclosing a very handsome sum of money to be applied on the General Fund, and assuring us that her interest in our work is as keen as ever. Mrs. Warner has helped us financially many times,
and this last donation is greatly ap-

The Hall will be open as usual all day Saturday, in the afternoon Tea will be served.

THE WORLD'S LARGEST CITY.

It is a Tumbledown Place in Mexico and is Called Namiquipa.

Namiquipa, in the state of Chibua-hua, Mexico, has the distinction of being the largest city in the world. Its site covers an area of 444 square miles, or approximately 284,000 acres, its exact boundaries having been fixed some 300 years ago by a charter from the then king of Spain, who gave the land to some colonists from Castile.

The greater part of the city site, however, is unbuilt upon, and, as regards the built over portion, many of the houses, originally constructed of sun dried brick, are in ruins.

Next to Namiquipa the biggest city of either ancient or modern times was undoubtedly Babylon. Recent excavations have uncovered the old walls, and they are found to have measured fifteen miles each way, inclosing the city in the form of a perfect square.
An easy arithmetical calculation shows us that the area of Babylon inside the walls, therefore, was 225 square miles, or 144,000 acres.

Compared with such figures as these Birmingham with 8,420 acres, Norwich with 7,472 acres and Glasgow with 6,111 acres are almost in the nature of small villages. Yet these are the three biggest British cities—that is to say,
they contain within their civic boundaries the biggest area of ground.

The city of London proper contains no more than about 640 acres, approximately one square mile.—London Tele-

Through the "U. E. Loyalist" Chap- ter, I.O.D.E.

Last week the Chapter and Com- mittee received four most kind dona- tions to our funds—one from a lady of advanced years who feels she cannot attend our meetings, but wishes to help in our good work; another from Mr. Wm. T. Waller; a third, of $1.00, from Miss Lenora Rodgers, and last but by no means least, a very gener- ous cheque of $50.00 from Mrs. Clarence M. Warner, of Boston. We beg herewith to express our gratitude to all the kind donors of these very ac- ceptable gifts.

Our many friends will be pleased to learn that our recent dramatic enter- tainment in the armouries resulted very satisfactorily for us financially, as we cleared $300.00.

We are very grateful to all those who in any way assisted us to realize this handsome sum, and we are par- ticularly grateful to the president and members of the Ladies' Aid of St. Andrew's Presbyterian Church for their kindness in withdrawing an entertain- ment in part, similar to ours, for which one rehearsal had already been held; and for their decision not to ac- cept any compensation for so doing.

Our work-room is open each Thurs- day and Saturday afternoon until 5.30 o'clock.

The Druids.

The druids were evidently of very great antiquity, for there cannot be much doubt that it was one of their customs that Vergil had in mind when he wrote in the "Aeneid," vi, 142, that the "only means of access for a living mortal to the world of spirits was the carrying of a golden twig which grew in a dark and thick grove." The re- semblance of the story to the druid- ical rite is perfect. The druids prac- ticed their rites in dark groves. If a mistletoe was discovered growing upon an oak a priest severed it with a knife, and a festival was held under the tree at which two milk white bulls were offered as a sacrifice. This was a sacrifice to the sun god, and the mistletoe, from its pale greenish yellow tint, was regarded as a kind of vegetable gold and was accordingly looked upon as being a fit offering to the sun.

Birds of a Feather.

Frederick Leveson-Gower in his re- miniscences relates that when he visited Moscow in 1856 for the coronation of Alexander II, "opposite our house dur- ing the procession was drawn up a reg- iment called Paulovski, formed by the Emperor Paul, all the men having turned up noses and therefore resem- bling him. It seems it was the fashion to compose regiments of men all hav- ing the same features. The late em- peror had recruits sent to him and told them off according to their looks. There is one regiment of men all marked with the smallpox."

Carpet Mills.

The first carpet mill in America was not established until after the close of the Revolution. It was in 1791, at Philadelphia, that carpet making as an industry was born in the United States. Since then, however, this country has become pre-eminent in carpet making.
